FULL BIOGRAPHY

Dick Hrebik—author, historian, Marine—brings an amazing amount of life experience, adventure, and spirit to each one of his books.

He has had quite a journey—as a white youth growing up in a segregated black neighborhood, as a career Marine stationed all over the world, including tours in Vietnam and Nigeria, and also as a legal administrator and college professor.

One might expect a Marine to love to skydive and mountain climb, but Dick also loves to sing and act, having been in several television series and commercials. His love of travel and adventurous nature have taken him all over the world, from climbing Mt. Kilimanjaro to crossing the Panama Canal. He has visited over 80 countries. He embraces life and loves engaging with everyone he meets—taking a little something from others' lives and letting it enrich his own.

When not traveling, Dick lives with his wife, Carole, in Black Diamond Ranch, FL. In his spare time he enjoys crafting his family wine at Vint Hill Farms in Virginia, which was a former U.S. Army high security listening site.
